From the Pathfinder Chronicles:
Divine prayer, and the magic that can accompany it, is a unique form of spellcasting. Unlike the rote-based incantations of a wizard or instinctive casting of a sorcerer, divine magic is granted rather than learned.

ROOOR!

TIME
FOR A
REMATCH, UGLY!

Higher powers can impart spells to their most faithful and, through time, loyalty, and experience, the bodies of these clerics become highly attuned. Their faith is rewarded, and in turn that faith grows, creating a cycle of unwavering confidence in the chosen deity.
